

Contents

Greeting messages

Zita Órley – Lilla Zakariás: Editorial preface	5
Bence Kas: The school founder aphasiologist at Bárczi	8
Zoltán Dénes: From part-time employment to scientific workshop	9

Papers

Zita Órley: Basic issues in speech and language therapy telepractice	11
Melinda Szászi-Szrenka – Veronika Dóczyné Nagy: Speech and language therapy in child rehabilitation	23
Alinka Molnár-Tóth: I know, but I can't say it! Interpreting acquired speech and language disorders: some theoretical considerations in the light of clinical practice	33
Izabella Szöllősi: Beyond lip and tongue exercises - A new understanding of adult acquired motor speech disorders	49
Viktória Kevická – Jana Marková – Alice Kušnírová – Zsolt Cséfalvay: Storytelling in Slovak-speaking patients with Parkinson's syndrome	67
Mariann Németh – Zoltán Dénes: A modern approach to the care of patients with dysphagia	79
Emília Bóla: Laryngeal apraxia – dysfunction of the phonation as a latent concomitant	83
Izabella Szöllősi – Gábor Szabó: Neuropsychological aspects of therapy for patients with post-stroke aphasia	95
Ildikó Pollák: Crisis waves, or how long does rehabilitation after brain injury last? A case study	107
Tibor Vámos – Berencsi Andrea: Factors affecting motor learning in post-stroke neurorehabilitation	115
Tamás Káldi – Anna Babarczy: Methods for investigating the relationship between word order and working memory processes
Lilla Zakariás – Ágnes Lukács: Intraindividual variability in sentence comprehension, word repetition and naming in post-stroke aphasia	143

Practical reports

Katalin Kitti Nagy: Group telepractice: a report from the Hungarian Aphasia Association	159
Mónika Gyenes-Kotra: Years of struggle and testimony of a man with apraxia	163
István Szél: My experience in training courses for speech and language therapists	169
Bence Kas: Speech and language therapy at Master's level: background and professional concept of the new Master's degree	187

